Moulthrop: A SOUTHERN LEGACY

THREE GENERATIONS OF WOODTURNING

The Moulthrops have evolved a distinctive style and a unique approach to their work that is recognized internationally. Living and working in Marietta and using primarily southeastern woods, recognition of their work began in the South and quickly spread worldwide. As a family they share a passion for wood and its natural beauty. While working independently to create and develop their own ideas, the work of each has benefitted from the shared knowledge of three generations of experience and experimentation. They speak the same language of form and graceful simplicity. Within each bowl they make is the connection to the South, the life of the tree, the history of contemporary woodturning, and the legacy of the Moulthrop family.
